Snowbombing has quickly become one of the most attractive and active European festivals. Based in Austria at the Mayrhofen resort it's a weeklong party, filled with enigmatic blue sky soaked vistas, black ski runs and white hot parties. Throughout its existence since 1999, it's grown in popularity housing live acts and DJs in an array of venues, from raucous street parties to in igloo dancefloors. Their forthcoming 2011 event sees the Snowbombing envelope pushed further, with the capacity for the festival expanded to house 6,000 people.

Marking the launch of the 2011 event and coinciding with the first announcement of next year's headliners the Snowbombing crew are bringing their party formula to Room One at fabric. Inviting fabric regulars and booty bass titans, Stanton Warriors, back to the main room they're teeming their reputation for riotous big beat performances with that hedonistic penchant omnipresent at the festival. Considered one of the world finest party DJs, we're welcoming back 3 time DMC champion, DJ Craze, to the fray. A man who is as adept at incorporating as many drum break styles into his sets as is humanly possible, often flicking from drum & bass rollers to hip hop bangers in one foul and uber technical sloop, Craze will join one of his turntablist savvy buddies, the Atlanta based DJ, Klever, the Streetlife DJs duo (described as the UK's answer to 2 Many DJs by DJ Mag) and Snowbombing resident Marc Roberts on the bill.

Backing them up in Room Three are one of London's most visible promoters (Snowbombing regulars), Urban Nerds. Styling themselves with aplomb they've put together a lineup packed with residents and associates alike, inviting the Mad Decent signed tropical grime producer Mumdance to headline the room. Backed up with a set from Croydon's A1 Bassline, the UN clique will be laying the foundations for a night of bass exploration with their residents Rattus Rattus, Klose One and Ordio Kid doing just as much damage as the talent.
